A total of 532 stool specimens were investigated for rotavirus by cell culture and HI test. Positive rate was 16.17%. The detected rotavirus was replaced by another strain, which was identified as a subtype RRV. To understand the genetic characteristics of the rotavirus found in Guangzhou, nucleotide sequences of VP7 gene were determined and analyzed. Result showed that majority of rotavirus strains in Guangzhou belonged to group A rotavirus. According to VP7 gene analysis, the majority of Guangzhou strains were characterized as G3 strains, but the majority were G1 strains in other areas of China.
